

Blocking Abortion in the Wild, Wild West:
Why Albuquerque's Red Light Abortion Clinic Must Be Stopped

By Eve Sanchez Silver
Founder
Coalition of Color For Life
<http://www.cocolife.us>
silver@cocolife.us

4 AM, April 29th, 2010

I'm not Catholic, and currently, I'm not attending church anywhere. The Life movement to date has been characterized by Catholic pro-lifers and Church leaders justly preaching that Life is sacred from conception to natural death. The point is, that this is true, inside or outside of church. Whomever you may be, the child, in the womb or the test-tube, is just like you: alive. He's alive wherever he happens to be: even if he happens to be awaiting death in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Think who Curtis Boyd's abortion targets are: Indian and Latino children, the children of poor White folks and poor Black folks, those on the fringes of society. Seres humanos, como tu y como yo. The poor and uninformed souls; the desperate, the weak, the hopeless; unaware that Life is the eternal, precious, wholesome, incredible gift, they are lead to believe that abortion will solve their temporal problems. Unaware of the risks to their young bodies: risk of cervical damage, of scarred wombs and more deeply scarred lives, of breast cancer risks, of future children's lives lost, those oft to be wept for in the distant future; much wanted but impossible now to carry due to abortion ravaged wombs. Abortion strips a woman of her self and long into that distant future, at 4 AM she will regret the actions of her youth, the loss of her breasts and family relations. She will weep for those lost sons and daughters all her life: and apart from Christ, there would be no peace at all.

As economics drive the huge, unyielding mechanisms of death, the grist and fodder become our youngest souls and frailest lives; those at the opening and closing of the gates of Life. If there is to be any work worth doing, any action worth taking, any risk of being find out as a Life advocate, take it, now.

- Hide quoted text -

I am appealing to everyone on the fringe and in the fabric of Life for Albuquerque to speak now and draw together. Si eres Latino, escuchame: Este es tu momento provida. Parate conmigo contra el abattoir de vidas humanas en Albuquerque, Nuevo Mejico.

Speak up. Speak out. Close the human abattoir in Albuquerque.

Never let it be.